

encouraged him to make the best of his way out of the forest.

At last he effected his purpose so far, that he came to the side of a large road, into which he resolved to strike; and, as it seemed much frequented, doubted not but it would at last lead him to the way he had left, as he always supposed that every one was eager to take the path to Happiness; but he forgot how many in life mistake their end by choosing evil for good, and so missing of all they desire.

To

To Happiness all think they tend,
But see what crowds mistake their end.

Here